MAINE MARKET OUTLOOK

Managing Partner's Message

As we turned the calendar to 2025, our country experienced some significant events: a new presidential administration, continued global unrest, and climate related natural disasters dominated the news. On the brighter side, unemployment continues to be historically low, inflation seems as though it just may be tamed, and commercial real estate is showing signs of recovery after experiencing several Covid and monetary policy shocks.

However, uncertainty abounds. It's harder than ever to predict the future economically or politically. That's why it's important to have someone who understands market fundamentals and spots trends early on your side. At The Boulos Company, we're investing in world-class technology and strengthening our capabilities to support owners and occupiers of commercial real estate. We recently welcomed a new VP of Operations, Andy Gerry to the team. He hit the ground running and we've been delighted to get to know him. We'd also like to say a big 'thank you' and farewell to Jessica Estes, who was with us for 21 years starting as a temp and holding every position at the company, the last two years as our fearless President. It's easy to say the company would not be what it is today without Jessica's hard work, ingenuity, commitment, and dedication to The Boulos Company.

We are also celebrating 50 years of supporting commercial real estate owners in Maine and New Hampshire! The Boulos Company has been blessed to attract some of the state's most talented real estate professionals, many of whom have written important articles in the pages that follow.

On a more somber note, we lost a long-time client, friend of the firm and former co-worker in 2024. Joe Wojick was a joy to have in our lives and we'll miss him.

Sincerely,

Nate Stevens

Office Market Outlook

NATE STEVENS | MANAGING PARTNER, DESIGNATED BROKER

The Greater Portland office market began 2025 with an increase in vacancy rates compared to the previous year. Direct vacancy rates across the entire market rose from 7% to 8.15%, which is the highest since 2013. Over the past several years, it became evident that the effects of the pandemic would persist longer than initially expected. This is due to pre-2020 leases of seven to ten years expiring and companies continuing to adjust their real estate needs as they rolled. While this trend was anticipated, a few unexpected movements in the marketplace drove the vacancy rate higher than anticipated. Direct vacancy rates had been trending downward over the last 3-4 years, however sublease vacancy rates were simultaneously increasing at a rapid pace, offsetting any positive trends in direct vacancies.

On an encouraging note, the 2024 office market saw a decline in sublease vacancy rates for the first time since the pandemic. The initial post-pandemic surge in sublease space was driven by companies shedding space mid-lease, so this reversal signals a positive shift for the local market's future. However, despite the drop in sublease space, the total vacancy rate increased, representing no positive net absorption in the overall office market. As in previous years, different submarkets experienced varying outcomes, with larger vacancies in certain areas sustaining higher overall rates.

The strongest submarket over the past year was downtown Portland, where both Class A and Class B properties experienced positive absorption and decreases in both direct and sublease vacancy rates. Notably, the reduction in Class B rates was entirely due to leasing activity and absorption, rather than conversions of office buildings to alternative uses such as residential or hospitality. This demonstrates a growing demand for office space in this submarket throughout 2024 and limited significant new office availabilities entering the market. These factors represent positive data points for the downtown Portland market in 2025. Unlike suburban markets, downtown Portland did not face substantial unoccupied spaces to backfill over the past year.

In contrast, suburban areas saw little change from a macro perspective over the last 12 months, with challenges persisting due to significant vacancies and limited demand for large suburban office space. As in previous years, a small number of properties in certain submarkets accounted for the majority of the empty space. For example, the Maine Mall area submarket had new vacancies hit the market with little activity on the demand side to help soften the blow, and a notable downsizing by one company left a large building in Falmouth unoccupied. While smaller buildings have experienced increased demand and a decline in vacancy rates, these positive trends have been overshadowed by larger companies vacating their spaces over the past few years. Unless demand for spaces over 30,000 square feet rises significantly in 2025, suburban markets are likely to continue facing higher vacancy rates. On a positive note, the medical office market remains robust, with a low vacancy rate of just 1.33%. While there are slightly more opportunities in this sector than in recent years, it remains a tight market, as evidenced by strong activity and several sizeable leases at the soon-to-be-completed Rock Row medical campus in Westbrook.

Looking ahead, large vacancies will likely continue to be slow to lease, preventing dramatic reductions in overall vacancy rates. However, the positive trend of decreasing sublease space is expected to support the market throughout 2025 which could lead to more stability across markets. Additionally, demand for office space appears to be at a five-year high as companies refine their understanding of employee workflows, hybrid work schedules, and future space requirements.

Industrial Market Outlook

JON RIZZO, SIOR | PARTNER, BROKER

Two areas related to the Industrial market came into sharp focus when considering the activity over the past year in the industrial sector.

- Sales – Pricing Expectation vs. Reality
- Leasing – Demand vs. Supply

Sales

In the industrial sector, the asking cap rates remain low. There needs to be a value-add opportunity for investors to feel bullish on proceeding with an acquisition at those rates. Value-add features might be a site that offers additional development potential and/or a mark-to-market opportunity in which a current tenant is paying below market rents with a short term remaining. Lending institutions remain bullish on the industrial sector in Greater Portland and are offering favorable lending scenarios even when lease terms have less than five years remaining. Vacancy rates remain below 2% in this sector, which has been the case for nearly five years. While there have not been many investment sales, we have seen transactions from owner users. The sale price per square foot for existing buildings is continuing to hold strong as the cost of new construction is still prohibitive in most cases.

Leasing

While tenant demand has decreased and lease rates have seemed to plateau over the last 12 months, there are tenants who will “pay up” for the right property that meets their specifications. This typically means a build-to-suit. Having a team in place to be able to execute on a build-to-suit in a timely manner will help win deals. This may mean spending money on soft costs to make the site come to life before construction begins. It also means being ready to execute. Time kills deals. It will go a long way if you are quick to act and buttoned up with your process.

Another theme as it relates to tenant demand are users that need a site with enough impervious area in addition to the building to be able to accommodate one or all the following:

- Additional Employee Parking
- Truck/tractor trailer parking
- Industrial Outdoor Storage (IOS)

I represent companies in which this requirement is a necessity, and frankly, these sites are very difficult to find, specifically as it relates to zoning for IOS. Municipalities may have an opportunity to reinvigorate sites that have been dormant if they are open to a more flexible zoning ordinance relating to this type of use. In many cases, the specifications of the building are somewhat secondary to the amount of usable land area available for storage, parking, etc. This reinforces the reality that tenants truly value the right physical specifications of a property and site. They can quantify the efficiencies of these sites.

In conclusion, the industrial sector cooled a bit in 2024 compared to recent years, however, it remains a target market for many investors and end users. We seem to have settled into a bit of a new normal with pricing expectations for existing product and cost expectations for new construction. This should continue in 2025, and my prediction is that we will see an increase in transactions over the next 12 months.

2025 Capital Markets Outlook

CHRIS PASZYC, CCIM, SIOR | MANAGING PARTNER, BROKER

Maine’s 2024 capital markets volume experienced significant head winds, which reflected the sector’s national trends. However, a handful of noteworthy investment transactions did occur. Multifamily, hospitality and industrial properties dominated the largest sales, ranging from below $1 million to nearly $14 million. Cap rates varied widely, from the low 5% range to over 12%, averaging in the high 8%, reflecting both the diversity of asset quality and risk profiles across the state.

The Federal Reserve’s cautious stance on interest rates throughout 2024 has kept borrowing costs elevated, slowing transaction volumes nationally but encouraging creative deal structures in Maine. Local sellers increasingly embraced options like seller financing and joint ventures to facilitate transactions.

Looking ahead to 2025, the incoming presidential administration and changes in Congress bring new unknowns. Key areas of concern include potential shifts in tax policies, regulatory landscapes, and economic stimulus measures, all of which will significantly impact commercial real estate markets. Additionally, the Fed is expected to keep rates flat through 2025. Therefore, capital availability will remain constrained, emphasizing the importance of strong equity positions and creative financing.

The Boulos Company Investment Sales by the Numbers

NUMBER OF TRANSACTIONS	16	16	35	22

CAP RATE (AVERAGE)	8.80%	7.90%	7.05%	7.75%

Investors should strategically assess opportunities by focusing on fundamentals like property cash flow, market rents, tenant stability, and market dynamics. Industrial properties, especially those aligned with logistics and e-commerce, and multifamily assets catering to workforce housing demand, are expected to remain attractive. However, higher cap rates suggest increased risk, underlining the importance of careful underwriting and due diligence.

For opportunistic investors, Maine’s evolving market conditions present opportunities to acquire assets at favorable valuations as sellers adjust to economic realities. Collaborating with experienced advisors will be essential in navigating these challenges and capitalizing on the state’s real estate opportunities in 2025.

The Boulos Company is here to guide you through this dynamic environment, ensuring your investment strategy aligns with emerging trends and opportunities.

Maine Retail Market Outlook

JOE ITALIAANDER | ASSOCIATE BROKER

In the world of retail, particularly in the Greater Portland sub-market, 2024 proved to be a year to remember. While there were plenty of alarming headlines throughout the year, there were more signs of strength and momentum that should give us a lot to be excited about for the retail asset class as we move into 2025 and beyond.

On a broader scale, retail shopping trends continue to exceed expectations and break records. According to Forbes, retail contributed $5.28 trillion dollars to the US economy in 2024, which is a record and a 3.6% year-over-year increase. Additionally, 2024 holiday retail sales between November and December represented a 4% year-over-year increase from 2023 and touched nearly $1 trillion dollars in sales, another record.

These macro trends have contributed to an exciting and evolving retail landscape here in the Greater Portland market. National brands continue to look for entry points into the market, with quite a few successful transactions to note in 2024:

- Dick's House of Sport purchased the former Sears box at 400 Maine Mall Road. The Maine Mall-anchored box consists of nearly 88,000 square feet and will house Dick's new experiential concept.
- Fast Fire'd Pizza concept Blaze Pizza opened it's first location in Maine at the end of 2024 at 451 Payne Road in Scarborough. Blaze leased nearly 3,000 SF next to Starbucks.
- Atlanta-based home improvement chain Floor & Décor opened its doors at 490 Payne Road in Scarborough at the former Christmas Tree Shops. The deal marks the company's first store in Maine.

- National eyewear brand Warby Parker signed a lease at 184 Middle Street in downtown Portland. This will be the company's first store in Maine and is expected to open in 2025.

While there were many deals to celebrate in 2024, it was not all 'hugs & handshakes' in the world of retail & hospitality. Here in Portland, we saw a shocking wave of restaurant closures towards the end of the year. Some of these closures included Local 188, Nosh Taco, Elsmere BBQ and Thistle & Grouse, among others, with additional closures expected in early 2025. The struggle highlights the difficulties that local businesses face in today's environment – such as increased buildout/construction costs, smaller labor pools, higher labor costs, and increases in costs of good sold.

On a national level, we witnessed concepts such as Big Lots, Party City and JoAnn Fabrics announce bankruptcy, with existing leases headed to the auction block. With that being said, early indications are that demand for these leases and upcoming available space remains strong, with high likelihood of backfilling.

In summary, I believe that 2024 brought far more good than bad, and has created momentum for a very strong 2025. Going forward, I expect to see better labor numbers and a stronger overall economy contribute towards the growth of the retail & hospitality sector, both on a local and national level. Retail space, particularly in the suburbs, will continue to be in high demand. Delivery of new product, such as the next phase of Rock Row, and the Town Center at Scarborough Downs, will provide an opportunity for exciting national brands to make their entry into the Greater Portland market. I am excited to see what's in store! (no pun intended).

Notes & Credits

Information contained herein is researched and provided by our in-house staff of administrative assistants, associates, associate brokers, and brokers.

We have included, to the best of our knowledge, all Class A and Class B office buildings in the Greater Portland area. Please feel free to contact us if we have inadvertently missed one.

Survey data collected as of 12/31/2024. Rents are shown as modified gross and defined as all expenses included, except electricity for lights and plugs, tenant's janitorial, and parking. Rents not quoted as modified gross were converted by the addition of an estimated $1.50 for HVAC and common area maintenance expenses as reported by owner.

Retail space is not included in this survey.

Net Absorption measures the total amount of SF leased over a period of time minus space vacated during the same period.

Rental rates outlined in this survey reflect rates for direct lease availabilities. When a range of rental rates are available, the prevailing rate is reported. Only direct lease rates are quoted in cases when direct and sublease space is available. When only sublease space is available, no rate is quoted. Subleased spaces that were occupied as of 12/1/2023 were not included as part of this Survey.

Definitions of Class A and B office buildings vary between markets. We define Class A office buildings as those that are investment-grade properties that feature a unique design with immediate access to parking. They must be ADA-compliant and benefit from highly professional property management. Class B office buildings are considered to offer utilitarian space without special amenities, are of ordinary design, except for historic, renovated buildings, and feature good maintenance with all floors handicapped accessible.

Please note that outside the context of this report, the Greater Portland market uses many definitions and thus any building noted herein may, as a matter of opinion, fall into a different category in the open marketplace.
